

Passion for work and drive to engineer her career path

DIXIE SULDA

SKILLED: Demi Morston, who started as a receptionist at Bowhill Engineering in 2017, has been promoted to project assistant. Picture: TAIT SCHMAAL

WITH the world at her feet Demi Morston could not settle for just anything as her future career path.

After five years as a stable hand in Murray Bridge, Demi was restless, she sought a more fulfilling role in a progressive industry and struck luck by spotting the Jobs SA advertisement in the newspaper for a trainee receptionist at Bowhill Engineering.

"I thought I want to do something that has meaning and has room for growth, my partner already lived in Bowhill," said Ms Morston.

Since winning her role in 2017, Ms Morston has been promoted to the role of project assistant and hopes to further progress in the industry.

Her promotion opened up the vacancy for a new receptionist and offered the opportunity to another eager local, Ebony. Bowhill Engineering's human resources co-ordinator Samantha Krollig loves the energy Demi brings to the team.

"Employed firstly as a trainee receptionist through the 2017 Jobs SA campaign, her welcoming smile, bubbly personality and motivation to do well in both her traineeship and her receptionist role has seen her opportunities grow," said Ms Krollig. Ms Morston's new project assistant role deals with the business end of engineering projects, but still offers ample opportunities to interact with members of Bowhill Engineering's family-like team.

"It's not sectioned off between office and workshop, we all get along really well, we are all country bumpkins, we are all locals and we look out for each other," she said.

The organisation's dedication to work-life balance provides employees with sufficient time on weekends for quality time to spend with family. Helping out at the stables two mornings a week while juggling her full-time role keeps Ms Morston's hardworking job ethic in check.

"I am a worker, I like to work, I can't sit still for two minutes," she said.

Bowhill Engineering is currently hiring, for more information see our 2019 Jobs SA vacancies.

THE ADVERTISER, SUNDAY MAIL AND MESSENGER, IN CONJUNCTION WITH THE STATE GOVERNMENT, HAS LAUNCHED JOBS SA 2019 TO HELP CREATE JOBS AND HIGHLIGHT SUCCESS IN SMALL BUSINESSES. AS PART OF THE CAMPAIGN, BUSINESSES WHO WANTS TO HIRE A SOUTH AUSTRALIAN EMPLOYEE CAN PLACE A FREE RECRUITMENT ADVERTISEMENT IN THE ADVERTISER'S CAREERS LIFTOUT UNTIL APRIL 27. TO DO THIS, EMAIL SALES2BUYSEARCHSELL.COM.AU, PHONE 131113 OR LOG ON TO JOBSSACAMPAIGN.COM.AU