

In Daily

By Elisabeth Marie

Briefcase: Business snippets from around South Australia

Adelaide intelligence paving the way to a safer world

Adelaide-founded open-source intelligence (OSINT) solutions company Fivecast has opened its new head office in Adelaide.

Founded in 2017, the company provides OSINT solutions enabling organisations to explore data and uncover actionable insights critical to protecting global communities against terrorism, organised crime, violent extremism, fraud, and drug, human and weapons trafficking.

Fivecast has strategic partnerships across the globe and is part of the “Five Eyes” alliance with its presence established in the United Kingdom and the United States.

The new head office in Adelaide joins those already operating in Arlington, Virginia, Canberra and London.

“Fivecast’s journey from Adelaide tech-start up to trusted defence partner at the cutting edge of the intelligence community is testament to the innovation and expertise our city holds,” said Minister for Trade and Investment, Nick Champion.

“The dynamic use of this technology and big data all headquartered in Adelaide provides endless opportunities for partnerships with international law enforcement, border security, intelligence, and defence organisations.

“Fivecast is a South Australian success story and the South Australian Government looks forward to being able to continue to support their expansion and sending local expertise overseas as we seek to improve security around the world.”