Detmold opens Australia's first dedicated bag testing facility

The Detmold Group's $500,000 LaunchPad facility in Brompton now tests paper and board repulpability and medical mask functional effectiveness.

Acting Co-CEO Sascha Detmold Cox said the facility was the first and only dedicated bag-testing facility in Australia and one of only a few laboratories able to test coated paper/board packaging for recycling.

"Innovation is essential in our industry, as consumers demand higher quality packaging and medical supplies," Detmold Cox said.

She said the LaunchPad laboratory had created bespoke testing equipment which replicated the usage of products in the real world

“The Detmold Group is investing in South Australia as this is the ideal place for us to reach national and international markets,” Detmold Cox said.
