

Briefcase: Business Snippets from around South Australia

8 Jan 24

By –Jim Plouffe

Detpak to produce single size bag for Uber Eats

Food delivery platform Uber Eats has teamed up with Detpak to produce smaller-sized pa per delivery bags to cater for small and single orders in Australia and New Zealand.

Detpak, a subsidiary of the South Australian third-generation family-owned Detmold Group, has created a “singles bag”, designed for single or small meals, snacks and individual drinks.

While the original standard-sized bag size will remain, the new option allows businesses to save storage space and reduce delivery costs for small orders.

Sales manager Romano Bolzon said Detpak’s production and shipping of the 100 per cent recycled paper bag would emit 47 per cent less carbon than the larger carry bag.

“These smaller bags mean less material consumption, processing and transportation which will help to reduce Uber Eats’ carbon emissions impact in comparison to the standard-sized bag,” Bolzon said.