

De Stefano & Co achieves finalist status at the 2025 Australian Cyber Awards for the second year running

De Stefano & Co is proud to announce that the company has been named as finalists in two categories at this year's Australian Cyber Awards. The announcement comes on the heels of De Stefano & Co's success at the 2024 Australian Cyber Awards, where the company was honoured to be named the "Cyber Security Consulting Business of the Year – SME".

Currently a finalist for "Cyber Security Consulting Business of the Year – SME" for the second year in row, the company's Head of Protective Security Services, Jeremy Watkinson, is also a finalist for the individual award for "Cyber Security Consultant of the Year – SME". This dual finalist status highlights De Stefano & Co's ongoing commitment to providing top-quality cyber security services to organisations across Australia.

The Australian Cyber Awards is a prestigious awards program dedicated to recognising the top businesses and professionals in the cyber sector nationwide. The winners of the 2025 awards will be announced on Tuesday 29th of April at the official awards ceremony in Sydney, where they will not only celebrate the achievements of the award finalists and winners, but also highlight and acknowledge progress and innovation within the broader cyber industry.

De Stefano & Co's Head of Protective Security Services, Jeremy Watkinson, expressed his gratitude in being announced as an award finalist:

"Being nominated for this award and becoming a finalist is such an honour. It not only validates the importance of the work we are doing at De Stefano & Co, but also my passion for cyber security, and my commitment to contributing to a safer digital world."

Soon to celebrate its 10-year anniversary, the De Stefano & Co team would like to thank their clients for their trust and support which has helped the company to achieve this significant accomplishment.
